

REPORT NAVAL CONFERENCE IS NEARING AGREEMENT

KILLING OF MAYOR ADAMS IS RELATED

Young Slayer Told of Crime at Birger's Trial Today

Benton, Ill., July 19—(AP)—Harry Thomason, youthful gangster and confessed slayer of Mayor Joe Adams of West City, took the stand today to testify against Charles Birger, his former chieftain, and Art Newman and Ray Hyland, on trial for the murder.

As Thomason took the witness chair he looked down and his gray eyes met those of Birger for whom he is alleged to have left his father's farm to become a hired killer.

The witness gave his age as 19. He said he had lived at West Frankfort, Ill., for eighteen years and met Birger last September.

Thomason said he and his brother Elmo, who was killed in the burning of Birger's fortified madhouse, "Shady Rest", last January 8, arrived at the roadhouse, December 11, the night before the slaying. The came in a stolen roadster.

Recited Death Plans

He described the roadhouse and then launched into a recital of the planning of the slaying.

Birger, Newman and Connie Ritter were in the room, Thomason said. "Boys, we got a job for you two boys to pull and it must be done tomorrow," the witness quoted Birger. "Newman said, 'Did you ever kill anybody?' and I said, 'no, why?'"

"Birger interrupted and said, 'We have picked you two boys to kill Joe Adams.'"

"Newman said, 'Do you know him?'"

"Ritter said, 'They will never suspicion you boys for they don't know you.'"

Got Instructions

The witness then described the instructions alleged to have been given by Birger to himself and brother.

"Birger said he would give us a letter to give to Adams and told us that if Carl Shelton (rival gang leader), Joe Adams or Walker came to the door of the Adams house, we should shoot without asking any questions."

"Birger said: 'We will give you the sedan. It's a hot car anyhow and we can burn it afterward.'"

"Ritter said: 'This law or state militia isn't big enough to take you under the wing of Charlie Birger and us and our machine guns.'"

Doubted 'Jews' Nerve

Hyland was then called into the room, the witness said.

"Newman said, 'That Jew has not nerve enough to drive that car,' Thomason testified.

"Birger said, 'What do you say, Jew?'"

"Hyland laughed and didn't say anything."

Continuing his story, Thomason said he went home that night but Birger insisted that Elmo stay at the cabin.

"Birger said to me, 'Bitch, you go back in the morning or we will send a man after you.'"

The next morning, Hyland and Elmo Thomason came to Benton to get Harry Thomason, he testified. They went to "Shady Rest" and then started for West City, which adjoins Benton. Hyland drove while Harry and Elmo rode in the rear seat.

Thomason spoke eagerly, as though glad to testify against his former chief.

Told of Killing

"We went up to Joe Adams' porch," he related. "We knocked and some woman came to the door. We asked if this was where Joe Adams lived and she said, 'yes.' We said we would like to see him. She said, 'I'm Mrs. Adams, wouldn't I do?' We said it was personal and had to see Joe. She called him. He was a big, heavy-set fellow. Elmo reached for the letter. I had my pistol up the sleeve of my sheep skin coat. I let it slide down easy, grasped the handle and opened fire."

The witness turned his eyes to the floor during the recital.

"Elmo opened fire, then, too. Joe yelled and fell. We ran west. I heard some screams and never looked back. We went down the street and jumped into our car. Hyland stepped on the gas and we went to Kate Williams' road house at Dowell."

Thomason said they then drove to Birger's cabin where they were paid $50 each. Connie Ritter, whom he described as a Birger lieutenant, paid the money at Birger's command, he said.

He told how the automobile later was burned on a lonely country lane, when Freddie Wooten, a Birger gangster, shot a hole in the gas tank and touched a match to the car.

ROAD HOUSE ON BYMASTER FARM ORDERED LOCKED

(Telegraph Special Service)

Oregon, July 19—(AP)—Circuit Judge William J. Emerson has ordered a padlock for the road house operated by William Ryan on the Bymaster farm, three miles north of Grand Detour on the Black Hawk Trail. The order was issued on motion of State's Attorney Martin V. Peterman.

Ryan, a former Dixonite, who is said to be under indictment in Lee County on a liquor charge has operated the resort for several months. Operatives working out of the state's attorney's office recently included this place with a number of others in a series of liquor raids at which time slot machines and a quantity of "moonshine" liquor are said to have been seized.

Rustic porch and lawn furniture will be manufactured in the former Black Hawk Trail cafe by Neff Clark of Oklahoma, who bought the unexpired term of the lease, when inmates and owner of the cafe, Sam Zouvas were arrested in a raid by federal officers. The former resort is located near Byron and was the scene of a shooting affray early in the summer.

SCENE OF FIGHT IN NICARAGUA IS LIKE GRAVEYARD

Bodies of 300 Rebels Lay Scattered in Ocotal City

Managua, Nicaragua, July 19—(AP)—Fearful of an epidemic, authorities at Ocotal, scene of Sunday's seventeen hour engagement between General Sandino, rebel leader, and 39 United States marines and a group of Nicaraguan constabulary, are cleaning up the city, which has the appearance of a big graveyard.

Vultures descended upon the battlefield over which the bodies of about 300 of General Sandino's men lay scattered, most of the killed meeting death from bombs dropped by five planes ordered from Managua to the rescue of the marines.

The rebel force which attacked Ocotal early Sunday brought down one American plane but the aviators escaped. It was piloted by Sergeant A. S. Munsch. One bullet punctured the gas tank and another bullet went through the pilot's pistol holster. He was accompanied by Marine Gunner Michael Wodarczyk.

Major G. D. Hatfield, in command of the Marines at Ocotal reported that all was well and that a column under Major Floyd was marching on the town to prevent General Sandino from reorganizing his forces.

RESULT OF BANDITRY

Washington, July 19—(AP)—The American government has expressed the view that the clash between U. S. Marines and the forces of the Nicaraguan general, Sandino, was the result of banditry by Sandino's forces and involved no political question.

This was the reply of Secretary of State Kellogg to protests against the Marines' defeat of the Nicaraguan general voiced at the Pan-American congress here.

Sandino and his force were described by the secretary as "wild" "lawless and resorting to banditry," and the general, formerly a liberal military leader, was said by Mr. Kellogg not to "have the support of either of the Nicaraguan political parties."

DELEGATES ARE OPTIMISTIC AS RECESS COMES

Reuter's Correspondent at Geneva Learns of Agreement

BULLETIN

London, July 19—(AP)—Reuters Geneva correspondent says he learns that the naval delegates have reached an agreement "in principle" under which the total tonnage of cruisers and destroyers is stated to have been fixed at 500,000 for Great Britain and the United States and 325,000 for Japan.

Geneva, July 19—(AP)—"We are more optimistic now than we have been for some days," Hugh S. Gibson, chief American delegate to the naval conference, declared after a conference today between the six principal delegates.

"The discussions are continuing in a most cheerful and friendly atmosphere," he added. "We are beginning to see some light ahead."

Mr. Gibson, however, indicated that this morning's deliberations which were devoted to the broader phases of the cruiser problem, would have to be followed by several other sessions of the "big six" and that the harmonious spirit prevailing did not necessarily signify rapid progress in concluding the work of the conference.

He stated that there would be no meeting of the executive committee for three or four days. This indicates that there is little likelihood of another public plenary session before next week.

The question of defining the obsolescence of cruisers appears to have formed the subject of today's discussion.

Replying to a question as to whether agreement was in sight on the number of 10,000 ton cruisers carrying eight inch guns, Mr. Gibson said that problem had not yet come officially before the conference and that it would be some time before it was reached.

NEW PUMPER FOR FIRE DEPT. IS CONSIDERED; ONE TO BE DEMONSTRATED TOMORROW

1,000-Gallon American LaFrance Machine Will be Shown

The first step toward providing Dixon with modern fire protection will be taken tomorrow, when the members of the city council will watch the operations of the latest type of American-La France combination pumper. Representatives will arrive in the city with the big machine this afternoon, remaining at the fire station until tomorrow when the series of demonstrations will be given in the down town section.

The pumper is of the 1,000 gallon combination type, which is being used in cities the size of Dixon where single fire units are afforded. The same type of apparatus is also used extensively in the largest cities where several companies are maintained. The pumper will give one demonstration at the river bank east of the Galena avenue bridge pumping water from the river and throwing it in several streams. It will also be stationed at the corner of Hennepin avenue and Second street where a demonstration of throwing water and the use of the pumper in taking water direct from the city hydrant system will be given. Fire chiefs from several of the northern Illinois cities will attend the demonstration as guests of Chief Thomas Coffey and the members of the fire department.

Commissioner Charles E. Miller of the department of public health and safety recently advertised for bids on a 1,000 gallon type of combination pumper and truck, and the request for bids has attracted manufacturers of fire fighting equipment, many of whom are seeking to demonstrate their apparatus in Dixon within the next few weeks.

Meanwhile Commander Byrd and his crew of the America are looking forward to their next great adventure—a flight to the South Pole—while C. D. Chamberlin, pilot of the Columbia, is anxious to perfect plans for a trans-Atlantic flying service.

DIXON YOUTH ARRESTED ON THEFT CHARGE

Robert Bowsom Admits Robbery of Home in Rock Falls

Robert Bowsom of this city was arrested last night by Chief of Police J. D. Van Bibber at his home in the west end of the city, and was being held at the city hall jail today for Whiteside authorities on a charge of robbing the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schoaf, 616 East Fourth street, Rock Falls yesterday afternoon.

When arrested, Bowsom carried a 32 caliber revolver and 41 pennies which are said to have been taken from the Schoaf home. Later the police recovered a leather pocketbook which had contained valuable receipts and a dime. The receipts Bowsom told the officers, he tore up and threw along the highway while returning to Dixon with his brother-in-law, Harold Bosley.

Last night Bowsom confessed to Chief Van Bibber that he alone robbed the Schoaf home. He stated that he rode to Rock Falls with Bosley and stopped in front of the Schoaf residence, both men having been intimately acquainted with the family. Bowsom upon finding the members of the family absent, entered through a window and hurriedly ransacked the house, taking the above mentioned articles. It was not until the pair were about three miles from Rock Falls that Bowsom informed Bosley of his act and displayed the stolen articles.

Seen By Neighbors.

Neighbors saw the two men at the Schoaf home and when the robbery was discovered, furnished the members of the Schoaf family with a description of the two, which resulted in their being taken in custody last evening. Bowsom was held and Bosley was released from custody, when the former stated that Bosley had no part in the robbery.

At the police station this morning, Bowsom informed the police that he would have shot himself before being arrested, had he possessed shells for the stolen revolver. Bowsom, who is 21 years of age, is under parole from the state reformatory at Pontiac, where he was committed about two years ago from the Lee county circuit court. Chief Van Bibber notified State Parole Officer Adams of Oregon of the violation of parole, but that officer preferred that the new charge in Whiteside county be prosecuted instead of returning Bowsom to Pontiac for his parole violation. Bowsom was also arrested and fined Saturday afternoon with others, following a fight at Lowell park.

Later in the day Chief Van Bibber received word from Sterling that a warrant had also been issued for Bosley, and the local officer immediately placed him under arrest, holding both for the arrival of Deputy Sheriff Chas. Johnson of Sterling.

Rickert-Schaefer Wedding Celebrated

Mrs. John Rickert of Ohio announced the marriage of her daughter, Miss Lydia Irene, of this city, to O'Darlen Ellsworth Schaefer of Quincy.

The wedding was quietly solemnized in Ottawa on Saturday, the sixteenth of April, Reverend Roderick Murray, of the First M. E. Church performed the ceremony.

The foregoing announcement will be received with much interest by a host of Dixon and Quincy friends, who will hasten to offer best wishes and congratulations to the young people who are both very popular.

Mr. Schaefer for a time last year was employed by the Dixon Telephone Company as lineman, but is now employed by the Bell Company. During his stay in Dixon he won many friends by his engaging personality. Mrs. Schaefer, who will continue in her capacity as bookkeeper and cashier at the Dixon Theater, is a young woman of charming personality, who has made countless friends by her never failing courtesy at the ticket window of the theater.

Mystics Will Hold Annual Picnic Sunday

The members of Dixon Lodge No. 27, Mystic Workers will hold their annual picnic Sunday July 24th at Lowell Park, using as the picnic ground the space north of the main entrance along the river. This space will provide ample room for every one, and is an ideal site for a gathering of this kind. Dinner will be served at 1:30 and supper at 5:30 promptly. Lodge will furnish buns, wafers, coffee and ice cream. Every Mystic in the district is urged to attend.

There will be a program of unusual interest to every Mystic Worker, after which there will be games and races, with prizes for winners of the various contests. The afternoon promises to be one of interest and the various committees are planning to show all attending this picnic a good time.

A launch will leave the dock on the south side of the river promptly at 12:00.

Further details of the picnic may be had by calling Mrs. Albert Carr, Chairman of the Refreshment Committee; Dorsey Lightner, chairman of the Sports and Game Committee; or Percy W. Busby, chairman of the Picnic Committee. The members of Dixon Lodge should be well represented at this picnic, as a large number from other towns have signified their intention of being present.

FINDING WORK FOR EXPLORERS.

When the Klondike and Alaska were opened, it was said that the last frontier of civilization had been crossed. When Roosevelt explored the Amazon and discovered the River of Doubt, it was proclaimed again that this was the last frontier. When Madame Noel crossed the Himalaya mountains and penetrated the holy city of Lhasa, it was proclaimed again this was the last frontier.

Both poles had in the meantime been reached, the Sahara had been crossed by automobile, clothes of a sort had been put on the South Sea islanders, Siberians were buying flippers, Siam had an American college professor for financial adviser, and radio sets in southern Rhodesia were conversing regularly with Schenectady. On the whole, it appeared that man had whipped the insects and his Satanic majesty, and could call the world his own private oyster.

All this last frontier blurb, however, appears to have been mere rumor and guesswork. The last frontier, like the rainbow's end, seems to be made of elastic. It stretches even beyond the infinite limits of imagination.

Every frontier that man reached on foot or horseback, or by canoe, must now be crossed by airplane. Commander Byrd, outlining his work for the next years, plans to fly over the south pole, circle South America, fly into the heart of the Amazon jungle, have a look at the interior of Arabia, and then hop over Mt. Everest.

This last expedition is perhaps the most daring flight that man can conceive today, though it is not beyond possibility. Every attempt to scale Mt. Everest, 29,000 feet above sea level, has met with failure. Airplanes have reached greater altitudes, Lieutenant Macready having reached 39,000 feet in this country, and Callizo of France having reached 41,000 feet. These altitude records prove that flying over the highest mountain in the world is possible, and should Commander Byrd undertake the expedition, he will no doubt meet with success.

But man in his colossal conceit need not think that flying over Mt. Everest will mark the crossing of an ultimate frontier, leaving nothing more for explorers to do. A flight over this five-and-a-half-mile hump on the earth's surface is but a preliminary trial flight for a hop to the moon or one of the neighboring stars. That Commander Byrd will live to see such star flights completed is open to doubt, but it takes a large calibre demagogue to say that it will never be done.

Frontiers stretch out into interstellar space for millions and millions of miles, and future generations of explorers have more to worry about than Columbus had in the days when the world was flat.

CHICAGO SLOWS DOWN.

If the official and semi-official propaganda services of Chicago have their way, the day is coming when the Windy City will be populated by people who go to bed with the birds and lead sensible smalltown lives.

Only a few weeks ago a Chicago police official declared that jazz music caused crime, and he pleaded for the abolition of jazz. Now comes the Chicago commissioner of health with a printed pamphlet asserting that business life in the famous Loop is nerve-wrecking in itself, and that any intense outgo of energy in amusement is burning the famous candle of life at its proverbial two ends.

Yet this is what is really being done by thousands of the young people of Chicago who, after full day's work and a hastily consumed meal, crowd the dance halls until the wee hours or attend parties until the time when the milkman is on his route," says the Chicago health bulletin.

"They 'pep it up by gin to the tunes of jazzmania,' without rest, without stop, with no thought of tomorrow. Such a life may look attractive while it lasts, but the well known gentleman with the fiddle comes along next day to demand his pay; for pay they must, sooner or later, and HOW!

"Fast living means spending more funds from the bank of good health than the balance justifies. Such checks drawn on that bank usually come back with remarks like 'no balance,' 'funds overdrawn.' When the resources are exhausted to the last penny, bankruptcy follows and receivership ensues. Receivership is often conducted in a hospital and the receivership of ill health is much worse than that of a financial kind. A young man can laugh heartily at ill fortune if his health is good. For good health is his most dependable bank account and with it he can pay for his lost job or squandered fortune."

Small towns that bemoan their deadness may, after all, have the correct slant on life, if the diagnosis of Chicago's fastness has any truth in it.

Many an arden swain's love for his lady has been rudely shattered by a concrete bridge.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN — PICTURES BY KNICK

The Tines watched the chocolate men parade right down the street, and then, wee Clowny shouted, "Let's join in, and follow 'long behind. At marching we are likely poor, but they won't mind that, I am sure. These chocolate soldiers look real sweet, and also very kind."

Up jumped the Tines, with a bound, and scampered out across the ground. The leader of the chocolate men saluted with a bow. "Just fall right in behind," said he. "This marching's easy as can be. You'll soon know how to do it right, for we will show you how."

A queer parade it really was, and rather funny too, because wee Clowny always stunted when he tried to keep in step. The others gaily marched along, and all began to sing a song that seemed to fit in nicely as they traveled hee, hee, hee!

An then the leader of the band stopped short and raised his cho-into hand. "Here's where we'll have to stop," said he. "We've walked a dozen blocks. And now we're 'fraid that we will break, so one more step we're going to take and then you'll find us snuggled in a spacious candy box."

What happened made the Tines grin. The box was there. They crawled right in. "Good-bye! Good luck!" said Scouty as the Tines walked away. And then the merry little band of Tines scampered, hand in hand, up to a spot where they all saw a husky man at play.

He stood there, blowing big white puffs out of a pipe, and o'er his cuffs they saw a lot of sugar. "Will you tell us, if you can, just who you are?" wee Clowny cried. The man just smiled, and then replied, "Why I make fluffy candy. I'm the fat Marshmallow Man."

An Ex-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE

To some the fare for a ride from the Louvre stop to Suresnes on the Seine might seem exorbitant. But then—why quibble even if it is. The one-way tickets cost 1 franc and 20 centimes—roughly, 4 cents and a half. It requires an hour and a half of gliding along through the scenery to make it. While this is not written as a glowing advertisement for the company that operates these swift steam cutters, it can truthfully be said that the ride is one of the cheapest and most delightful excursions that American Legionnaires will be able to take in September.

Past the Bois de Boulogne—Auteil—under Napoleon's bridge—under the Pont d'Alma—past Sevres.

A tug puffs along, towing a string of six barges—..... an old lady on the last barge is hanging her week's washing on the line. The next stop is Bas-Meudon, and it costs 50 centimes to ride on a flâneur to the top of the hill. "St. Cloud, where the Americans play golf and dub as many drives as they do in the States—..... Billancourt station is next—..... and many others.

The boat shoves its pointed nose along the quay—..... the pilot—like all true French pilots—toots a whistle—..... down goes the gangplank—..... a rush of the passengers—..... another toot of the whistle—..... and the boat glides on. There's a café—"Au Poisson Rouge"—"The Red Fish." There's another—"La Pêche Miraculeuse"—

"The Miraculous Fish"—just what the fish did no one knows, except that he might have been the one that jumped from the frying pan into the fire.

And you "Remettez Votre Billet a La Descente"—and, also, "Il est Interdit aux Voyageurs de parler au Pilot." In other words you give up your ticket when you leave the boat and you are not permitted to carry on a conversation with the skipper.

This is Suresnes—the last stop. That hill up there is Mont Valerian—once a Roman fort. On the slopes of the hill is the American cemetery. And it costs another franc and 20 centimes to make the return trip.

SAINT and SINNER

Amusement spread over Cherry's expressive little face, then was succeeded by a dimpling, colorful wave of delight. She rushed to the table, her quarrel with Bob forgotten, and flung her bare arms about his neck.

"Oh, Bob! Will you really let me work for you? Honestly? You darling old fussy-bugger!" she crowed.

"And Bob, honey, you were right about Churchill! The old shik tried to date me up for dinner tonight—at a roadhouse. Oh, Bob, I'll adore working for you!" And she kissed him hard on the lips.

Faith sank into her chair. In spite of the heavy, throbbing summer heat she felt cold all over. She could not speak, could not turn her staring, fascinating eyes from the face of her husband. The ugly thought squirmed through her mind that Bob looked silly—fatuous—as he allowed Cherry to caress him. She told herself with sudden bitter distaste, that he looked like a Tom cat that is about to begin to purr.

In spite of his preoccupation with Cherry something of Faith's misery and disgust must have penetrated Bob's consciousness, for he fleetly glanced at her set, staring-eyed face, then abruptly pushed Cherry away.

"This is a fine way to accept a business man's offer of a position," he told her, making a rather too obvious effort to joke about her ardor. "Go get your chop. It's keeping warm in the oven. And bring in the shortcake while you're about it. This sister of yours has outdone herself on raspberry shortcake, and I'm raring to get my teeth into it."

Cherry laughed gaily, rumbled his hair with a quick gesture, then sped to the kitchen. Still pretending that nothing was wrong, Bob helped himself to most of the fluffy mashed potatoes, remarking in a casual, cheerful voice:

"I suppose if Cherry's made up her mind to work she'll be better off in my office than anywhere else. And Churchill is certainly out of the question. Be a god thing to have her where I can keep an eye on her, not half as much danger of her getting into mischief." Still he did not look at Faith, whose eyes had never wavered in their terrible, sick, probing stare.

She could not answer. Her body was gripped in that deadly cold, a sort of paralysis of fear. She knew that if she opened her mouth to speak that she would scream at him that Cherry must not work for him, that she—his wife—would not permit it. Bob—and Cherry. Bob, her husband, and Cherry, her sister, the adorable little girl whom she had mothered, for whom she had always sacrificed her own comfort and pleasure! Bob and Cherry! The names

ONLY 2 PER CENT OF CATTLE SHOW REACTION TO T. B.

But Three of 180 in Lee
County Reacted During June

Springfield, Ill.—Less than 2.25 per cent of the dairy cattle in Illinois reacted to tests for tuberculosis during the month of June, a report of the division of animal industry filed with the state department of agriculture indicated today. Ten counties reported no reactors.

Seventy-one Illinois counties participated in the tuberculosis eradication program under the county area plan in June. In all 60,925 head of cattle were subjected to the tests, bringing total under supervision up to 1,088,262. Reactors detected total 1,359 head. Cattle slaughtered as the result of these and preceding tests, total 1,316, which demands indemnity of approximately $55,000, half state and half federal funds.

Following are listed the counties operating during June, the number of cattle tested in each, and the number that were pronounced tubercular:

Valuable Hints for Farmers and Their Good Wives

When timber is cut on a farm woodland it is best to leave the younger trees for future growth. Even if all the timber is mature, seed trees should be left at intervals to take care of the job of reseeded and bringing up a new crop of trees. This method is more effective and cheaper than artificial planting—but fire must be kept out.

Cows that are delirious can be kept together in close quarters or yards without danger. Those with horns endanger their attendants as well as one another, and the horns are also an inconvenience in feeding and watering. Cows that are not kept for show purposes should be dehorned.

In sections where a second or fall crop of potatoes is grown it is advisable as a rule to plant the crop considerably deeper than the early one on account of high soil temperature, which is unfavorable to tuber development, and also for the purpose of obtaining better moisture conditions. On sandy, loam soils the seed may be planted from five to six inches deep, but on the heavier types four to five inches is more satisfactory.

Clean, bright oats (whole or crushed), rolled barley, well-cured alfalfa hay, and a small quantity of green feed, preferably carrots, is the daily diet used in most rabbitries. Wheat bran, mixed with oats or barley (equal parts by volume), may be fed about once a week with good results. Clover hay may be substituted for alfalfa where the latter is not available, but alfalfa is preferable and is eaten more readily.

Changes in the rose's ration should be made gradually or digestive disorders may result. Care in all feeding operations is necessary for complete utilization of the feed and consequent fitness for work at all times.

United States agriculturists warn against appearance of the snake-weed on range land in the southwest.

Overgrazing and drought, they say, combine to favor the unwelcome plant, which is devoid of forage value. Grama grass, important to the range, will predominate if cattle grazing is regulated to keep it in good growth. The roots of the Grama intermingle four or five inches below the soil surface, probably absorb most of the available moisture, and give the snake-weed little chance.

Where original vegetation has been destroyed, snake-weed helps check wind erosion of sandy soils.

AMBOY FAIR TO RECEIVE $3,000 FROM THE STATE

Increased Appropriations
Made by Last General Assembly

Springfield, Ill.—(AP)—County and other agricultural fairs in Illinois will draw upon state funds for premiums more extensively this year and next, than ever before, as the result of amendments to existing laws that have increased appropriations for this purpose from $350,000 to $440,000.

The sliding scale by which such funds are apportioned, is revised upward accordingly. Last year $150,044.45 was used for this purpose and the increase for this year amounts to $86,678.33.

Funds from the state treasury are issued to support the agricultural fairs, upon their compliance with legal requirements, in proportion to the amounts they pay in premiums for other than speed events. This year and next, they get from the state $350 of the first $1,000, $750 of the next $1,000, and $1,300 of the next $2,000 in place of $300, $500 and $800, of the first $4,000 they pay out in premiums. Heretofore, they were entitled to reimbursement of thirty per cent of all premium payments in excess of $400. Now, they will get $50 of each thousand beyond $400 from the state.

Funds applicable for these payments in accordance with the extended laws, are payable first from the state and county fair premium fund, which is created by license fees and admission taxes paid by licensed race tracks.

Figures showing the extent by which leading fairs profit through the increased appropriation follow:

LEE COUNTY CORN AS GOOD AS ANY IN FIVE COUNTIES

Telegraph Reporter in Auto Trip Throughout Community

A staff reporter made a motor trip over northern Illinois on Sunday passing through the counties of Lee, Ogle, DeKalb, Kane and McHenry, and on the way paid particular attention to the crop conditions.

Much of the barley is in the shock and wheat coming along in fine shape. Within a week or ten days the wheat will be in the shock. Barley and wheat looks good. Oats fields are full of weeds. Some farmers declared that oats are light. Hay is a splendid crop and nearly all of it has been harvested.

In the vicinity of Rochelle the pea farmers were busy in the fields on Sunday. In several pea fields several mowers were at work and many teams were hauling peas to the hullers, two of them working all day. In several of the sweet corn fields as many as eight teams were plowing all day. Sweet corn looks good.

Lee county has as good looking corn as any of the five counties visited. All along the way we noticed that corn will be but an average crop. Some fields are better than others, but on the whole it will make but a half crop and then only if we have a late fall. Most of the corn has been laid by.

Kane county is largely a dairy county. We saw many herds of fine looking cows grazing on fields where the grass was good. What wheat, oats and corn we saw in Kane county was about the average. DeKalb county has many splendid farms and crops are a little above the average. But nowhere is corn any better than the corn we saw in passing through a portion of Lee county.

In the vicinity of Crystal Lake there has been very little rain for several weeks and the country is very dry.

SCAB DISEASE IS REPORTED AMONG WHEAT

Prevalent in About
Two Thirds of the State Now

Urbana, Ill., July 19—(AP)—Scab disease in wheat is unusually prevalent and destructive throughout the wheatfields of two-thirds of Illinois, according to a survey just completed by L. R. Tehon, plant disease expert of the Illinois Natural History Survey here. Only the northern fields escaped, Tehon said.

The disease first appeared in extreme southern Illinois in the early days of June. As the season advanced, the disease spread farther north until from 2 to 40 per cent of all fields were found to be infected. The amount of damaged grain averaged more than one-third.

Scab is a conspicuous, easily recognized disease, Tehon said. It attacks the wheat heads, blighting and killing the small hulls in which the grain is held, and preventing the wheat kernels from filling properly. Scab infected hulls turn yellow while healthy hulls are still green, and after a day of rain they have a distinct pink color about their bases. This color is regarded as an infallible sign of scab.

Scab is doubly dangerous in that the fungus causing scab also causes a destructive root disease of corn, Tehon said. When corn is harvested, the fungus lives in the soil on remains of old corn stalks. If wheat is planted after corn, considerable damage is sure to result.

In fields examined, a smaller amount of scab was found in fields which had not been in corn the year before, while heaviest scab was found in wheat planted in corn stubbles. Less infection was found when oats had preceded wheat and still less when both oats and clover had intervened.

From this survey, it was concluded as the best known means of reducing scab, an adequate rotation of crops with a long period between planting corn and wheat.

He Met Byrd—and Walked For First Time Since War

The story of Captain LeGendre—how the maimed French flyer, a human war wreck, walked for the first time in nine years when Commander Byrd visited him—came singing over the cables from Paris the other day. Here is the story as NEA Service cameras saw it.

It was at the Invalids, the hospital which shelters LeGendre and other "Broken Wings," that Byrd and the war hero met. With LeGendre in his wheel chair (upper photo), they started to the tomb of Napoleon, a short distance away.

"You give me courage," said LeGendre—and leaving his chair, he took his first steps since a wartime plane crash broke almost every bone in his body. The lower photo, showing LeGendre standing between Byrd and Lieut. George Noville, with Bernt Belchen in the background, was taken on the steps of the tomb.

SNEAK PUNCH BY DEMPSEY IS ONLY FEAR OF SHARKEY

Is Confident He Can Meet ex-Champion
at Any Style

BY ALAN J. GOULD

Associated Press Sports Editor
New York, July 19—(AP)—The only thing Jack Sharkey fears in his battle with Jack Dempsey Thursday night is that the former champion may pull a "sneak punch," as his manager calls it, or land a lucky blow.

But Sharkey is confident Dempsey won't be able to slip anything over. He feels that he will be ready to meet the ex-champion on any terms or in any style of milling.

Sharkey's almost indifferent, pay-as-you-enter workouts, have contrasted sharply with the secrecy surrounding Dempsey's preparations.

The principal result has been to throw the experts into more confusion than usual when it comes to picking the winner.

Critical verdicts, based on ring form have kept Sharkey a favorite in most wagering, but newspaper polls among the average fans have revealed decided confidence in a successful comeback by Dempsey.

CIVIC ACHIEVEMENTS

BY DON E. MOWRY

Secretary, American Community
Advertising Association

It is good business for cities to take an annual inventory of their accomplishments and to advertise those accomplishments to the tax payers and residents. There is perhaps no better method of increasing civic pride.

Toledo, O., put over an internal advertising campaign of this sort in an unusual manner.

Suggested by the newspapers, the directors of the Chamber of Commerce resolved to organize and finance a suitable and appropriate educational campaign to be known as Achievement Week, to be followed up by a Forward Toledo Movement, in an effort to make the undertaking an outstanding community enterprise of lasting benefit and permanent value to the city.

The newspapers composed a general committee to handle the project under the leadership of the Chamber of Commerce. By newspaper publicity, by public meetings, by exhibition of products in show windows, and by other similar methods, approved by the committee, the entire city was informed and instructed concerning the steps taken in material progress.

There were also demonstrated prospects the city holds for the near future in matters of industries, transportation, banking and merchandising. The people of Toledo became acquainted with Toledo and what Toledo really is and has to offer. It was not a boosting campaign, but a campaign to sell the city to itself.

THE TYRANNY OF SMOKING

"Tis surely time that some one spoke against this tyranny of smoke! It is a thing that can be cured. Far, far too long have we endured.

Unchecked have smokers held the field. "Majority" has been their shield. And they have trampled on each right.

Non-smokers had—protest despite. Ignoring notice to refrain. Not once, but often and again. In railways they go anywhere. And spoil with nicotine the air.

At restaurants, the tea-shops, too. Where smoking should be quite "taboo". They puff their smoke across the food Which does the flavor little good.

On hat-tops usually they take. The front seats, and a nuisance make Of smoke, and sometimes sparks which fly Landing in some non-smoker's eye!

In cinemas they'll often sit. And when their pipes or cigs they've lit. Their neighbors they will disregard. And puff away and make it hard.

For those who are on either hand To get the pleasure they had planned. While in a post office or shop A smoker hardly cares to stop.

With a weed between his teeth—Regardless of what lies beneath! And in the street it's just as bad—One can't escape this dirty fad.

Yet there is still one place that's free—Which in in church—so come with me. And, feeling thankful, sit in peace. There only, does this barrage cease.

Enough to make a pipe get puffed up

IF YOUR jimmy-pipe could talk, it would say: "Fill me with Prince Albert and watch me strut. I'll repay you a hundred-fold." No doubt about it, many a pipe has been blamed for things that weren't its fault a-tall. You have no idea how well a pipe behaves on P.A.

On my say-so, buy yourself a tidy red tin of good old P.A. today. Throw back the hinged lid and revel in that fragrance of the world's greatest pipe-tobacco, bar none. Then tuck a neat wad into the business-end of your pipe and light up. There's the answer to every pipe-wish.

Cool as a pound-keeper. Sweet as escape from the place he keeps. Mild, but with that full, satisfying flavor of the greatest tobacco that ever tumbled into a pipe. No matter how wide you open the smoke-throttle, there isn't a stop-sign or a detour anywhere.

Nearby is a store where they hand out jimmy-pipe joy in tidy red tins. My advice to you is to make tracks for there at once. Fill your pipe with this glorious tobacco and get the fun that's due you. No matter what your present program is, try P.A. Give your pipe a chance!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and punch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Building a Royal Cord Balloon on the Flat Band Machine. It is perfectly possible to carry out the policy of "Plenty of Rubber" with the old-style methods. But the invention of this machine by the United States Rubber Company made tire construction a more exact and controllable process than ever before, and so makes it possible to build in "Plenty of Rubber" with greater precision.

EXPRESSED in terms of your car, "Plenty of Rubber" means this:

The United States Rubber Company has the rubber resources, and is using these resources to make United States Tires give you truly "More for your Money."

The test on the wheels of your car is the final answer to all theories and questions.

As rubber growers, rubber experts and tire authorities, we know that the plenty of rubber we build into Royal Cord Balloons will prove itself.

When a Man Loves

John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Picture.

SYNOPSIS
In old France, the Chevalier Fabien des Grieux, a youth as handsome as good, awaits the Paris coach which will carry him to St. Sulpice, where he will train for the priesthood. Meanwhile, on the way, a beautiful young orphan, Manon Lescaut, being taken to a convent by her only relative, a brother, who doesn't want to be bothered with her; but who, seeing rich Comte de Ravoir, a connoisseur of women, feigning his eyes upon her, suddenly realizes her worldly value, and proposes a stay overnight at an inn.

"I would love to, brother dear. I suppose the convent will be all right but I hate the thought of wearing coarse, drab convent clothing." Manon bent over and kissed her brother's hand as if ashamed of her objection to this fine thing he was doing for her. The two men looked at each other over the girl's bent head. The Comte nodded gratefully. Lescaut was glad that the wealthy man understood why Manon was to remain at the inn over night. He, also, secretly felt that it was just as well for Manon to have expressed a hatred for ugly attire—the Comte might have the privilege of gawking her as extravagantly as he desired—provided, of course, he paid for the right.

As the diligence neared the White Horse Inn, the man on the box raised the great coach horn to his lips and blew a long and loud blast. The footman jumped off and, waving aside the waiting students, opened the door with a flourish.

Lescaut alighted first and swaggered on toward the courtyard, utterly ignoring his sister. Comte tion, were entering the inn arm in arm. They did not notice the young student and Fabien impatiently stood aside until they had entered. As he again turned toward the entrance Manon appeared.

Feeling strange and rather lost, Manon glanced up timidly wondering if some one had come to help her. Then when she saw Fabien's face she stood still and leaned against the door frame for support. One hand went quickly to her throat and she pressed hard to stifle the cry of happy fulfillment that came from her heart.

But Fabien did not notice her and walked on.

As young as Manon was, she realized that she had always been waiting for some one, and that someone was the young student priest who just passed without seeing her!

Suddenly Fabien stopped—remembering that he had forgotten his portmanteau. Or perhaps he felt the power of Manon's need as she stood there looking at him. At any rate he turned and their eyes met!

Fabien stared at Manon, fascinated as though she were some being from another world.

"Oh, my dear, my DEAR!" And he took a step toward her. His lips were parched. His throat was dry. Something greater than himself clutched his whole being.

Manon gazed at Fabien, breathlessly. Her eyes were big and luminous and her lips finally parted to say—without her knowing it—"I am so happy that you have come—I was lonely!"

Manon appeared so extremely beautiful that for the first time in his life Fabien appreciated the difference between men and women. Up until now his chaste conduct had been the theme of universal admiration among his associates.

Fabien stared at Manon, fascinated as though she were some being from another world.

De Ravoir stepped out next and gallantly turned to assist Manon from the diligence as though she belonged to him.

"Permit me, my dear!" She flushed with annoyance and scarcely touched his extended wrist as she stepped daintily to the ground.

The students watched her admiringly, but she appeared not to notice them, and they began piling into the diligence with their portmanteaux. From here they were to journey on to St. Sulpice and complete their final training as priests.

There was just a touch of pathos in the honest admiration these young men showed for Manon. Youths going away to be priests. But Manon was destined for the Convent. There was little or no difference—just youth giving up everything for something it thought was very much worth while, peaceful and satisfying.

Lescaut turned back and joined the Comte familiarly. They wound their way through the groups of students in the courtyard, leaving Manon to follow toward the inn as best she could, alone.

Within the tavern the lay brother was still talking earnestly to Fabien des Grieux, who listened attentively and nodded his head—the charm against worldly evil sent to him by the Bishop.

"My son, the diligence has arrived. You must be on your way." "Yes, Father, I am ready." Fabien replied and warmly grasping the holy one's hand he turned toward the door.

"Before you go, I want to say that you are about to enter upon a new life—a richer, deeper life than you have hitherto known—our blessings go with you!"

"I am grateful to you all." Fabien hurried toward the door, forgetting his portmanteau.

The diligence horn was sounding the signal for departure and Fabien was eager to speak with his friend Tiberge before starting. As he neared the door he almost collided with Lescaut and the Comte who, engaged in close conversa-

He underwent a change that deprived him of all reason and self control when he looked upon this girl for the first time. His excessive timidity left him and with-out the slightest hesitation he advanced toward Manon, who in a moment had become the mistress of his heart and destiny. His fingers, that so reverently held the little charm against worldly evil, opened—and the Bishop's medal fell unnoticed to the floor. Fabien stood before Manon in ardent admiration.

"What has brought you to Amiens?" he inquired breathlessly. "My brother has travelled here with me so that I may commence my novitiate for taking the veil at the Convent." Manon did not take her eyes from the youth's face as she replied.

Fabien heard in this announcement a death blow to his hopes. Love had so quickened his understanding that he seemed to be another person.

"Have you any acquaintances in the town?"

"No, I shall be here entirely as a stranger, when my brother returns to Paris."

The departing diligence signal and voices of the students suddenly penetrated through their consciousness. For a few blessed moments they had not known that any one else lived.

Almost dazed, Fabien feasted his eyes upon Manon's delicate beauty. It was his promised duty to go away.

Chancing to see something brought on the floor, Manon picked up Fabien's forgotten medal and held it in her hand. He saw that it was his and mechanically extended his hand for the little charm. As their hands touched a thrill passed through them, a thrill that frightened and bewildered because they had never experienced the stimulating influence of association with anyone of the opposite sex.

With a small startled gasp, Manon pulled her hand from Fabien's warm grasp and started for the interior of the inn.

Brother and Sister

Reunited by Radio

St. Louis, Mo., July 18—(AP)—A radio announcement has reunited a sister and brother after a separation of 21 years. The sister is Mrs. Ada Wallace, 23, of Mount Vernon, Ill., and the brother is Charles Clavin, 21, of Oakville, Mo.

When small both were placed in an orphanage when their mother died and their father, now blind, was unable to give them a home. Later the children were adopted by different families.

Mrs. Wallace, who now is married, and has two daughters, obtained permission from a local broadcasting station to announce that she was searching for her brother.

Mrs. Carrie Hageman of Oakville, who had adopted the brother, heard the announcement. The reunion followed.

Colonel Lindberg's popularity ought to last a long while, unless of course, he gets careless and expresses an opinion about somethin'. "I don't have no trouble killin' time when I'm workin' but I don't know what to do with myself when I'm loafin'," complained like Soles today.

Dempsey's Arm is Sore; But Nothing Serious Say Aides

Saratoga Lake, N. Y., July 19—(AP)—Circumstantial evidence has very nearly convicted Jack Dempsey of an injured arm only three days before he meets Jack Sharkey. But a single mute witness, a 200 pound sand bag, slowly turned a battered face to newspapermen and the charge of serious injury had to be dismissed.

The final explanation was: several days ago Dempsey, in protecting himself from sparring partners caught several blows on his left arm. A slight soreness developed and his handlers wound the arm in liniment and bandaged it to protect his clothing. The bandage itself had no significance.

Dempsey's training here ends today with a short limbering workout. He will go to New York tomorrow.

6 BIG DAYS AND NIGHTS 6

For months there has been a combined effort on the part of the Officers, Directors and Committeemen interested in the coming Chautauqua to secure a program more varied, more interesting and better than we have ever had. We believe this ambition has been accomplished. In many ways this program will prove to be our best program.
